EXPERIENCE

KEMP's namesake co-founder is a 35-year dispute resolution veteran who rose to head Stephenson Harwood's Hong Kong litigation and financial services practice. His decades at the top of the Big Law tree have given him a keener appreciation than most for what really goes into an effective and satisfying legal practice. The recipe turns out to be simple (but not easy to reproduce): unimpeachable technical skill, a cost-conscious approach and, above all, great colleagues. KEMP's tribe is the handpicked team he wants to play for at this stage in his career.

With a practice anchored in Hong Kong and London – cities he loves in equal measure - Malcolm has earned his burnished reputation in focal areas: commercial litigation, insolvency and restructuring, marine and international trade and contentious regulation. Clients count on his plain-dealing approach, whether the news is good or bad: best-in-class representation turns on an honest appraisal of interests and prospects.

Working between two multicultural hubs on either sides of the world, Malcolm makes time to enjoy Hong Kong's buzz and work ethic, and London's inexhaustible culture and history. KEMP's horizons are broader than the HK-UK axis: a multilingual European and Chinese-speaking team has the prowess to operate effectively for clients on all the territory in between.
